Dr. Farina King will highlight the life and work of Dr. Isabel Cobb, one of the first female Native American physicians. Dr. Cobb served the Cherokee Nation and community in northeastern Oklahoma in the late nineteenth century and early twentieth century.

Dr. King is an assistant professor of history at Northeastern State University, the site of the former Cherokee National Female Seminary where Dr. Cobb attended and worked during her formative years.

Wednesday, March 24
12 pm CST
Zoom Registration